Procurement of Goods and Services*

Incorporates previous University Policies 3.5, Paying for Services (Independent Contractors/Consultants); 3.5.1, Service Provider Payments (Independent Contractors/Consultants)-Weill Cornell Medical College; and 3.12, Procurement Card

POLICY STATEMENT

Cornell University’s Board of Trustees delegates significant procurement authority for the acquisition of goods and services from external sources on the university’s behalf. This authority is ultimately delegated to designated purchasing agents and contracting officers. These stewards of university funds must base such purchases on sound business practice, best value, accountability, and compliance with donor, sponsor, and regulatory requirements. Further, the university expects individuals making purchases to follow the principles referenced in this policy, as well as the procedures prescribed in the university’s official Buying Manual.

REASON FOR POLICY

With Cornell University’s decentralized operations, it is appropriate to establish an overarching policy to guide all procurement transactions. Responsible stewardship in the expenditure of university funds entails the proper combination of price, quality, reliability, service and delivery terms, and compliance with donor and sponsor requirements.

POLICY 3.25

Procurement of Goods and Services

PRINCIPLES

Ethical and Legal Considerations in Procurement

The university must comply with the laws governing its operation. Individuals and units making purchases on behalf of the university must adhere to specific practices in bidding, purchasing, and paying for goods and services with Cornell funds. These practices are driven by compliance with applicable laws and regulations, university policies, and sound and ethical business management.

Detailed procedures for compliance with this policy are prescribed in the university’s official Buying Manual, which is maintained by Procurement and Payment Services.

Standards of Ethical Conduct

Units or individuals procuring goods or services on behalf of the university must comply with University Policy 4.6, Standards of Ethical Conduct in the course of all transactions. Examples of illegal and unethical practices include engaging in price fixing arrangements; bid rigging acts; agreements with competitors to divide or allocate markets or customers; falsifying accounting records; intentional misrepresentations to the university’s auditors; bribery; kickbacks; and political contributions. In addition, all procurement professionals are expected to follow the standard code of ethics established by the National Association of Educational Purchasing (NAEP) (see appendix D).

◆Caution: Personal gifts or gratuities must be declined, and if received, returned to the vendors or suppliers (see the Definitions section of this document).

Purchases/Rebates/Free Merchandise

If a vendor offers free merchandise or a rebate with purchase, that merchandise or rebate is the property of Cornell University. Rebates will be returned to the account that was utilized to pay for the purchase. Free merchandise will be turned over to the unit’s director/department head for appropriate distribution (e.g., departmental use, drawing for all faculty/staff, charitable donation).

Conflict of Interest

The university expects its faculty and staff to avoid any real or potential conflict of interest when procuring goods or services on its behalf. For additional information, refer to University Policy 4.6, Standards of Ethical Conduct, and the University Conflicts policy.

Authorized Purchases

Units or individuals procuring goods or services on behalf of the university must comply with University Policy 4.2, Transaction Authority and Payment Approval. Authorized purchases are those that have contracts approved by Procurement Services and purchase orders in place prior to receiving goods or services. Examples of unauthorized purchases are those that are not in compliance with any aspect of this or other university policy, including improper bidding and/or making commitments for payments without proper authorization. Unauthorized purchases increase legal and financial risks for the university.
POLICY 3.25

Procurement of Goods and Services

Business Purpose

Units and individuals must not make purchases from suppliers that are not for an approved business purpose. (See University Policy 3.14, Business Expenses.) Procurement of goods or services for personal use is strictly prohibited, including the use of Cornell discounts, tax-exempt status, etc. Procurement for the purposes of resale must be made in accordance with the requirements of this policy. All subsequent resale activity must be done in accordance with University Policy 4.3, Sales Activities on Campus.

Vendor Selection

The vendor selection process at Cornell University must identify the best, most qualified and/or suitable vendor to meet the needs of the university, while complying with all applicable laws and regulations. Vendor selection and approval must be managed by an authorized agent. In many cases, suppliers are preselected based on campus input, screened, and negotiations have already been conducted, resulting in preferred supplier agreements. Where such agreements exist, units must procure goods and services from these preferred suppliers regardless of dollar amount or procurement method, unless you are purchasing from a local or diverse supplier in accordance with the purchasing hierarchy as specified in Buying Manual section 102, Requirements for Vendor Selection and Order Creation. In situations where a preferred supplier agreement does not exist and where the purchase exceeds the formal bid limit of $10,000, units must identify a vendor through competitive bidding, unless an appropriate justification (as defined by the Buying Manual) and an alternative method of selection are specifically authorized by a procurement agent or other university-endorsed contract, e.g., a New York State contract, Group Purchasing Organization, etc.

Bidding Process

Cornell University will engage in competitive bidding in a manner that creates a fair, open, and competitive environment for qualified vendors, and that secures the best value possible.

Units must adhere to the following requirements when engaging the bid process:

Obtain a minimum of three formal bids when a purchase will exceed the formal bid limit of $10,000, except when purchases are made from a preferred supplier (other exceptions noted in Procurement Services’ Buying Manual; for example, state-appropriated and federal funds).

2. Share information equitably and in a timely fashion with all involved parties.
POLICY 3.25
Procurement of Goods and Services

Environmentally Preferred Procurement
Cornell University will identify and promote environmentally responsible procurement by featuring sustainable products and services, practices, processes, and procedures.

Supplier Diversity
Cornell University will promote the development of significant and mutually beneficial business relationships with diverse and local suppliers. Particularly when utilizing federal and state funds to procure goods and services, the university will put forth a good-faith effort to utilize diverse businesses, when practical. For more information on diverse suppliers, see www.sba.gov/services.

Small Business Administration
Cornell University will promote equal access to Cornell University’s procurement opportunities.

Relationships with Suppliers
Cornell will maintain the highest standards of business ethics and conduct when interacting with suppliers. Relationships with suppliers will support the promotion of environmentally preferred practices, diverse business utilization, and small businesses.

Delegated Authority for Purchases and Contracts
The Board of Trustees has delegated transaction authority for procurement to various individuals and offices at Cornell University. Only these individuals are permitted to carry out such delegated transactions. For a list of such transactions and the responsible offices, please refer to Appendices B, C, and D of University Policy 4.2, Transaction Authority and Payment Approval. These individuals must follow the requirements of the policy governing transaction authority in carrying out such delegated transactions.

In cases where transaction authority for procurement is delegated to Procurement Services, the director of Procurement and Payment Services may further delegate that authority to certain individuals for particular transactions related to their functional responsibilities (see appendix B of this document).

Unless delegated as above, the director of Procurement and Payment Services is authorized and responsible for:

- Negotiating all procurement terms and conditions
- Committing funds on behalf of the university to procure and pay for goods or services, including equipment
- Approving the execution of all purchases of goods and services

Where a business need exists to delegate the procurement function to units or individuals outside of Procurement Services, the director of Procurement and Payment Services will execute a written “Memorandum of Understanding” (MOU), which will contain the specifics of the delegation, including the scope, reason, and time limit for the delegation. In addition, the primary responsible party for the delegation must be identified and agreed upon by both the unit and the director of Procurement and Payment Services.

Procurement Services will review the delegation annually to assess the need for continuation of the agreement and whether any modifications or other alignment is needed.

Delegated units must develop procedures consistent with the requirements of this policy. If the procedures followed by the unit differ from those outlined in the official Buying Manual, those procedures must be documented, attached to the MOU, approved by the director of Procurement and Payment Services, and are subject to periodic review.

Failure of a unit or individual to follow university policy may result in withdrawal of the delegated authority.

For a sample MOU for Spend Delegation, see appendix A. For a list of the delegated spend categories and the responsible individuals, see appendix B.

Procurement and Payment Methods
Cornell’s e-procurement system is the preferred method for initiating an order for goods and services. For suppliers enabled in this system, units should utilize this procurement tool for all transactions with that supplier to ensure that the unit receives Cornell’s negotiated pricing. For the preferred supplier utilization hierarchy, refer to the Buying Manual.

For goods and services not available through Cornell’s e-procurement tool, a purchase order or a similarly approved method of committing funds is required.

In addition, units must use an approved payment method when paying for goods or services. The following are the approved payment methods:

- Procurement Card
- Direct payment to the vendor by check or equivalent electronic payment methods

◆Note: In unusual circumstances, reimbursement may be used as a method of payment (see the Reimbursement segment of this policy).

For restrictions related to each of these methods of payment, see appendix C. For procedures related to each of these payment methods, refer to procedural documentation in the Procedures section of this policy.
POLICY 3.25

Procurement of Goods and Services

Procurement Card

A procurement card (pcard) is a university liability credit card that is issued in an employee’s name and may be used for certain low-dollar, business-related purchases. Since the cards are a university liability, the bill is paid centrally by Cornell for all balances, and no purchase order or reimbursement process is necessary.

◆ Caution: A procurement card may only be issued to an employee whose job description includes procurement.

Because the pcard allows the end-user to pay for goods and services directly, without a preapproval process, specific rules and regulations on the use of pcards have been documented in the Procurement Card section of the Buying Manual referenced in the Procedures section of this policy.

◆ Caution: Failure to use the pcard in compliance with university policy, including the Procurement Card section of the Buying Manual, can result in the suspension or revocation of the pcard and possible disciplinary action. Fraudulent use of the pcard can result in employee termination, expulsion from school (for students), and criminal charges.

Individuals holding a university pcard must do the following:

- Comply with all terms outlined in the Procurement Card section of the Buying Manual
- Keep his or her pcard number confidential; lending or sharing the card is not allowed
- Comply with the per-transaction and cycle limits assigned to the card
- Purchase only business-related items permitted by University Policy 3.14, Business Expenses; personal purchases are not allowed on the pcard
- Not purchase any item listed as a “prohibited transaction” in the Procurement Card section of the Buying Manual, including the use of a pcard with any supplier available through Cornell’s e-procurement tool
- Submit sufficient documentary evidence, including original receipts and an explanation to support the business purpose of each purchase on the card, as described in the Procurement Card section of the Buying Manual
POLICY 3.25

Procurement of Goods and Services

Reimbursement

Cornell provides a personal liability travel card ("corporate card") for employees who must travel frequently as part of their jobs. Employees may also pay personally for their business-related meals and/or business-related travel expenses, and then seek reimbursement from the university. Out-of-pocket reimbursement is designed for business meals, travel, entertainment (generally hosted meals), and occasional, incidental expenses. For more information, refer to University Policy 3.2, University Travel. Additionally, the university generally does not reimburse employees for another individual’s expenses.

If an individual is likely to require reimbursement for services or for other than business-related meals, travel, or other infrequent, incidental expenses, his or her business service center (or, at the Weill Cornell Medical College, the Controller) must be contacted for pre-authorization for such expenses.

Contracts

Individuals with the appropriate transaction authority can negotiate and execute contracts, such as purchase orders, that provide the university with the best overall value for goods and services from external suppliers. This authority lies with Procurement Services and/or specified, delegated units or individuals (see University Policy 4.2, Transaction Authority and Payment Approval). Cornell’s approved terms and conditions apply to all contracts, except those that will be paid for with New York State funds.

◆ Note: Supplier contracts and pricing information are deemed proprietary and must be kept confidential. This information may not be used for any purposes other than official university business, except when public bidding is required.

Independent Contractors

An independent contractor, commonly referred to as consultant, freelancer, contractor, etc., is an individual or entity engaged to perform services. This service provider is not supervised by Cornell employees.

Delegated spend units and individuals must use the university-approved “Independent Contractor/Consultant Agreement” when engaging the services of independent contractors, available through Procurement Services (see the Procedures section of this policy). Before services commence, the contract must be signed by both the service provider and the person with the appropriate transaction authority. Units and individuals must obtain authorization from University Counsel and/or an authorized procurement agent to change the language of the contract. Procedures related to paying for services and independent contractors are outlined in the Buying Manual referenced in the Procedures section of this policy.
POLICY 3.25

Procurement of Goods and Services

Purchases with Special Requirements

Regulatory, safety, and other organizational needs may necessitate the need for review and approvals from other units or entities before an order can be reviewed by Procurement Services or a delegated procurement professional.

Paying for Services, Including Foreign Nationals

In consultation with an authorized procurement agent or the University Tax Office, and based upon Internal Revenue Service (IRS) regulations, units must evaluate whether to classify a service provider as an independent contractor. This evaluation must occur before engaging an individual or entity to perform services, and before any services begin.

Items with Health and Safety Concerns

Please refer to University Policy 8.6, Environment, Health, and Safety for specific policies regarding procurement and approval of items that may have health and safety considerations (e.g., pest control products).

Purchases of Goods or Services that Impose Insurance Requirements

The individual procuring the good or service must comply with the requirements for insurance established by the Office for Risk Management and Insurance.

Emergency Purchases

When an emergency situation occurs, an authorized procurement agent may make a commitment to a vendor without a formal purchase order. Such transactions would include, for example, an unanticipated and sudden life-threatening or catastrophic event.

State and Federal Appropriated and Sponsored Funds

Units must comply with all state, federal, and/or sponsor requirements for procuring goods and services when funds from these sources are used. These requirements may include the need for sponsor approval prior to acquisition of goods or services.

Capital Assets

Capital asset acquisitions, trade-ins, and disposals must be handled in accordance with University Policy 3.9, Capital Assets. Units are responsible for providing timely updates to the university’s capital asset system.

Record Retention

The Office of the Controller and Procurement Services or the appropriate delegated unit must maintain records of procurement and disbursement transactions routed to their respective offices. These offices also must establish guidelines for documenting other delegated purchasing methods in accordance with applicable regulations. For further details on record retention, see University Policy 4.7, Retention of University Records.
POLICY 3.25

Procurement of Goods and Services

PROCEDURES

To comply with this policy, you must follow the procedures prescribed in the official Buying Manual, maintained by Procurement Services and available online at www.dfa.cornell.edu/procurement/buyers/manual. This document provides general information, flow charts, forms, and detailed procedures, as detailed in the table below.

◆Note: Those units with delegated spend authority that have supplementary or different procedures must submit them to Procurement Services, per the “Memorandum of Understanding” referenced in appendix A.

I have reviewed the details and reasons for the spend delegation specified in this document, and I certify that they are accurate.

I agree to follow the policy requirements laid out in University Policy 3.25, Procurement of Goods and Services. The internal procedures followed in my spend unit match/do not match those outlined in the official Buying Manual. Documentation of procedures is attached with this MOU.

The outlined procedures are designed in a manner that meets the policy requirements laid out in University Policy 3.25, Procurement of Goods and Services.

I agree to a periodic review of the MOU (three-year default unless agreed upon by both parties) with the understanding that terms and some details may be subject to change upon agreement between the parties.

I certify that I am the designated individual authorized to sign off on the delegation.

APPENDIX C: PAYMENT METHODS

Cornell’s e-procurement system is the preferred method for initiating an order for goods and services. For goods and services not available through Cornell’s e-procurement tool, the primary method of procurement at the university is the purchase order. Purchase orders represent the university’s offer to buy goods and services, and when all parties have fulfilled the obligations outlined in the university’s terms and conditions, the university will issue a payment to the vendor.

Certain goods and services do not require review by Procurement and Payment Services or the delegated unit and may be eligible for payment by another approved method. Each of these alternate methods has its own set of restrictions, which should be reviewed carefully before initiating payment.

◆Note: The purchase order is always an acceptable method for initiating a purchase, even when an alternate payment method is available.

The following are additional approved payment methods:

Procurement Card

- Individuals who have been issued a university procurement card (pcard) may pay for certain goods and services with this credit card. These payments are generally of a low dollar value where no pre-approval process is necessary. For details on the pcard and a list of the goods and services that are prohibited from payment by pcard, please refer to the Procurement Card section of the Buying Manual.

Direct payment to the vendor by check or equivalent electronic payment methods

- Certain goods and services under the formal bid limit of $10,000, which do not require review by Procurement Services, may not be appropriate for payment by pcard (e.g., the vendor does not accept credit cards; the good or service is prohibited from payment by pcard). Therefore, a request to pay a vendor with a university check or equivalent electronic payment method (without the issuance of a purchase order) may be appropriate.

Procurement Services determines which goods and services will not require a purchase order based on certain risk factors, such as tax and insurance requirements. Because these risk factors change from time to time, the list of goods and services also may change. Consult the Buying Manual for the most current information on those goods and services that may be eligible for payment by check or an equivalent electronic payment method.

Out-of-pocket reimbursement

- Cornell provides a personal liability travel card (“corporate card”) for employees who must travel frequently as part of their jobs. Employees may also pay personally for their business-related meals and/or business-related travel expenses, and then seek reimbursement from the university. Out-of-pocket reimbursement is designed for business meals, travel, entertainment (generally hosted meals), and occasional, incidental expenses. For more information, refer to University Policy 3.2, Travel Expenses. Additionally, the university generally does not reimburse employees for another individual’s expenses.

◆Caution: If an individual is likely to require reimbursement for services or for other than business-related meals, travel, or other infrequent, incidental expenses, his or her business service center (or, at the Weill Cornell Medical College, the Controller) must be contacted for pre-authorization for such expenses.

Procurement of Goods and Services

APPENDIX D: NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF EDUCATIONAL PURCHASING (NAEP) CODE OF ETHICS

The following Code of Ethics of the National Association of Educational Purchasing (NAEP).

Purchasing professionals must have a highly developed sense of professional ethics to protect their own and their institution’s reputation for fair dealing. To strengthen ethical awareness, and to provide guidelines for its members, NAEP has long promoted a code of ethics.

1. Give first consideration to the objectives and policies of my institution.
2. Strive to obtain the maximum value for each dollar of expenditure.
3. Decline personal gifts or gratuities.
4. Grant all competitive suppliers equal consideration insofar as state or federal statute and institutional policy permit.
5. Conduct business with potential and current suppliers in an atmosphere of good faith, devoid of intentional misrepresentation.
6. Demand honesty in sales representation, whether offered through the medium of a verbal or written statement, an advertisement, or a sample of the product.
7. Receive consent of originator of proprietary ideas and designs before using them for competitive purchasing purposes.
8. Make every reasonable effort to negotiate an equitable and mutually agreeable settlement of any controversy with a supplier; and/or be willing to submit any major controversies to arbitration or other third party review, insofar as the established policies of my institution permit.
9. Accord a prompt and courteous reception insofar as conditions permit to all who call on legitimate business missions.
10. Cooperate with trade, industrial, and professional associations, and with governmental and private agencies for the purposes of promoting and developing sound business methods.
11. Foster fair, ethical, and legal trade practices.
12. Counsel and cooperate with NAEP members, and promote a spirit of unity and a keen interest in professional growth among them.
