POLICY 6.3
Consensual Relationships

PRINCIPLES

Overview
As an institution where any person can find instruction in any study, Cornell demands ethical behavior from all who are engaged in its mission of learning, discovery, and engagement. Every person should have the freedom to pursue academic, training, research, and professional interests in an environment without preferential or unfair treatment, discrimination, harassment, bias, or coercion. Romantic or sexual relationships between faculty members or others in positions of authority over students and postgraduates can jeopardize the integrity of that mission for the individuals involved and for those around them.

Even where they are fully consensual, romantic or sexual relationships between students and postgraduates and the faculty members or others in positions of authority over them can affect more than just the parties in the relationship:

- They can harm the overall academic environment by compromising professional judgment and impartiality then and in the future, affecting grading, distribution of resources, academic or professional recommendations, and more.
- They often undermine collegial dynamics among the students and postgraduates themselves because of rumored or actual favoritism.
- They can tarnish the academic reputation of the faculty members or others in position of authority and of the university itself.
- They can lead to complaints of harassment and other legal claims.

Regardless of their outcome, relationships between students and postgraduates and the faculty members or others in positions of authority over them can linger within the careers of all parties, potentially driving the student or postgraduate from a discipline or hampering the student’s or postgraduate’s academic and professional progress.

Terminology and Scope
This policy is about sexual and romantic relationships that are consensual and have a dynamic that involves power imbalance. This means that one individual in the relationship (the person in a position of authority) can or could influence the academic or professional progress of the other (the person in the subordinate role).

The principal but not exclusive focus of this policy is on faculty and student/postgraduate relationships.

University Policy 6.4, Prohibited Bias, Discrimination, Harassment, and Sexual and Related Misconduct, addresses bias, discrimination, harassment, and sexual and related misconduct. Some situations may implicate both this policy and University
POLICY 6.3
Consensual Relationships

Policy 6.4. The university has the discretion to determine which policy and procedures best apply to a situation, and it will notify affected parties promptly regarding the applicable policy and as relevant, procedures.

Prohibited Relationships

Romantic or sexual relationships between faculty members or others in positions of authority and students and postgraduates are prohibited under the following provisions:

Provision 1

Any member of the Cornell community who has, or has had, a sexual or romantic relationship with a student or postgraduate is prohibited from exercising academic or professional authority over that student or postgraduate.

Provision 2

Sexual or romantic relationships between faculty members and undergraduate students are strictly prohibited regardless of the department, school, or college affiliation of either party.

Provision 3

Sexual or romantic relationships are prohibited whenever a faculty member or other individual holds a position of authority over the student or postgraduate or is likely to do so in the foreseeable future.

Relationships That Are Not Prohibited, but That Require Disclosure

Because a graduate or professional student’s educational pursuits may evolve and that student may become academically aligned with a large number of faculty members or others who are affiliated with the same graduate field or degree program, the university discourages all intra-field/degree program relationships that are romantic or sexual in nature. When a romantic relationship develops under these circumstances that may not directly violate Provisions 1-3 above, it is nonetheless important that the faculty member or other person in authority promptly disclose the relationship to the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX and that an appropriate recusal plan is developed.
POLICY 6.3
Consensual Relationships

Additionally, faculty members or others in positions of authority must disclose a sexual or romantic relationship with a student or postgraduate under any of the following circumstances:

- A relationship existed prior to either or both parties coming to Cornell.
- There is a sexual or romantic relationship between a faculty member or other in a position of authority and a student or postgraduate, and both parties are affiliated with the same graduate field or degree program but have no academic or working relationship with one another and do not expect to in the future.
- An individual finds themselves in a relationship that is otherwise in violation of this policy.

Promptly disclosed relationships in violation of this policy will be handled on a case-by-case basis by the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX, with a focus on protecting the student’s or postgraduate’s educational and professional opportunities and addressing conflict of interest concerns for all parties. Prompt and honest disclosure is the only method to mitigate such violations of this policy, but does not provide immunity from discipline for violations.

◆Note: If clarification is desired regarding whether a relationship requires disclosure, contact the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX.
POLICY 6.3
Consensual Relationships

The Disclosure Process

The Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX is an important part of the disclosure process and serves as the primary resource to the university community for guidance and enforcement of this policy.

The purpose of disclosure is to set in motion a Recusal Plan that protects the individuals involved and the university environment. The individual in a position of authority is responsible for disclosure, and that individual should inform the student or postgraduate beforehand. Students and postgraduates are not obligated to inform the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX of prohibited relationships or those requiring disclosure. However, any party may make the disclosure.

Note: Any party with knowledge of a prohibited relationship may make a disclosure to the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX.

Note: After any disclosure, the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX will first contact and notify the parties in the relationship.

If a student or postgraduate is the individual in a position of authority (for example because of a teaching, laboratory, or other supervisory role over a student), then timely disclosure should be made to the individual’s supervisor (or the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX). Thus, a graduate student working in a laboratory or serving as a teaching assistant in a course must disclose the potential for conflict of interest to the director of the laboratory or to the faculty member who is teaching the course. The individual and the supervisor must develop a Recusal Plan and promptly seek approval of the plan from the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX.

If a student or postgraduate has any concern that a relationship may be impacting their educational or employment environment, the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX can offer guidance and resources. Faculty members and other employees who are aware of a relationship in violation of this policy are encouraged to disclose that information to the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX.

The Dean of the Faculty is an advisory resource along with the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX for those seeking guidance on whether to report a suspected policy violation.

Disclosures reveal personal and potentially private information. The university will carefully consider the privacy and other interests of persons affected by disclosures when taking action under this policy.
POLICY 6.3
Consensual Relationships

The Recusal Plan
When a disclosure is made, the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX, in consultation with appropriate campus colleagues (department chair, college human resources, Dean of the Faculty, etc.), will develop a Recusal Plan or determine that one is unnecessary. The Recusal Plan identifies and addresses conflict of interest and other problems inherent in relationships where one individual has authority over another. The Recusal Plan identifies the individuals responsible for its enforcement and the terms for its review and as necessary, renewal. The plan also specifies the individuals (in the department, lab, or other environment) who will be advised of the plan. The Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX will contact the student or postgraduate in order to inform them of the disclosure, to seek their input on the proposed Recusal Plan, and to advise them of relevant resources. The Recusal Plan should be approved and signed by both parties. It will be filed at the Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX and in the college or unit HR office.

Violations of This Policy
Violations of this policy include: failure to make a required disclosure in a timely manner, failure to adhere to a Recusal Plan, participation in a prohibited relationship, and retaliation against any person who, while acting in good faith, provides information about a suspected violation of this policy.

The university may take disciplinary action as appropriate if an individual is found to have violated this policy. Violations of this policy are subject to discipline up to and including termination or expulsion. The Office of Institutional Equity and Title IX serves as the point of contact for complaints regarding, and investigation of, alleged violations of this policy. This policy will be implemented consistent with existing human resources and disciplinary processes for faculty and staff.
POLICY 6.3
Consensual Relationships

PROCEDURES, WEILL CORNELL MEDICINE CAMPUS UNITS

The Disclosure Process
If a Weill Cornell Medicine (WCM) student or postgraduate has any concern that a relationship may be impacting their educational or employment environment, the associate dean, student affairs or associate dean, graduate school (hereinafter referred to as “associate dean”) and the WCM Human Resources (HR) office can offer guidance and resources. Faculty members and other employees who are aware of a relationship in violation of this policy are encouraged to disclose that information to WCM HR. The associate dean is an advisory resource along with WCM HR for those seeking guidance on whether to report a suspected policy violation.

If a WCM student or postgraduate is the individual in a position of authority (for example because of a laboratory or other supervisory role over another student), then timely disclosure should be made to the individual’s supervisor (or the associate dean or WCM HR). Thus, a graduate student working in a laboratory must disclose the potential for conflict of interest to the director of the laboratory or to WCM HR. The individual and the supervisor should develop a Recusal Plan and promptly seek approval of the plan from WCM HR.

Disclosures reveal personal and potentially private information. WCM will carefully consider the privacy and other interests of persons affected by disclosures when taking action under this policy.

The Recusal Plan
When a disclosure is made, WCM HR, in consultation with appropriate campus colleagues (department chair, associate dean, vice dean, etc.), will develop a Recusal Plan or determine that one is unnecessary. The Recusal Plan identifies and addresses conflict of interest and other problems inherent in relationships where one individual has authority over another. The Recusal Plan identifies the individuals responsible for its enforcement and the terms for its review and as necessary, renewal. The plan also specifies the individuals (in the department, lab, or other environment) who will be advised of the plan. WCM HR will contact the WCM student or postgraduate in order to inform them of the disclosure, to seek their input on the proposed Recusal Plan, and to advise them of relevant resources. The Recusal Plan should be approved and signed by both parties. It will be filed in WCM HR.
POLICY 6.3

Consensual Relationships

Violations of This Policy

Violations of this policy include: failure to make a required disclosure in a timely manner, failure to adhere to a Recusal Plan, participation in a prohibited relationship, and retaliation against any person who, while acting in good faith, provides information about a suspected violation of this policy. Pursuant to this policy, all reports of allegedly nonconsensual relationships will be referred to the associate dean. WCM may take disciplinary action as appropriate if an individual is found to have violated this policy. Violations of this policy are subject to discipline up to and including termination or expulsion. WCM HR serves as the point of contact for complaints regarding, and investigation of, alleged violations of this policy. In consultation with the vice dean and university counsel, WCM may develop and publish protocols and procedures to implement this policy.
